INTRODUCTION

This is the third volume of the Tudor series (Part IV) of the edition of the London customs accounts (TNA: PRO E122). It is comprised of 1) the wool customs and subsidy particulars of account and controlment roll for 1493/94 and 2) the tunnage and poundage controlment roll for 1494/95.

Everything the reader needs to understand about the English customs system – and the peculiarities of the customs administration in London – has been detailed in the introduction to the pilot edition.<sup>1</sup>

On the face of it, there is nothing out of the ordinary in these accounts which would require explanation. There are no royal licences or other customs or subsidy exemptions to be elucidated, and the customs system seems to tick over efficiently and noiselessly.

The act of parliament of 8 Feb. 1473 – which mandated that the staple company retain all receipts from customs and subsidy on wool exported to Calais after 6 Apr. 1466, but made it responsible for all expenses relating to its defense (set at £10,022 4s 8d per annum)<sup>2</sup> – had been extended from 1488 for 16 years<sup>3</sup> and was still in force in 1493/94. Therefore, the customers had virtually no income to report when they accounted in Hilary term, 11 Henry VII,<sup>4</sup> since the staple merchants had retained the customs and subsidy on their exports (£10,191 17s 1¼d). This was done by authority of an act of parliament dated 9 Nov. 1487<sup>5</sup> and a royal mandate to the customers dated 20 May 1488, which was not copied onto the record of the hearing before the Exchequer<sup>6</sup> and has not survived otherwise.

Similarly, a cursory inspection of the tunnage and poundage account reveals no obvious mysteries. Although one customer (William Brett) died during the accounting period (on 26 Feb. 1495)<sup>7</sup> and was replaced by Nicholas Mattok the next day,<sup>8</sup> this has left no trace in the controlment roll, other than that the controller had to reset his internal designation of the individual membranes, as explained in the description of the account (p. 99-100). But the controller's internal designation of the membranes of his roll is hidden in the stitching, so that the only indication in the controlment roll that anything untoward had happened is the fact that the controller left the dorsal side of the membrane blank at the end of the import (m 9d) and export sections (m 27d) at the end of the first accounting period (29 Sept. 1494-26 Feb. 1495) and began the entries for the second accounting period (26 Feb.-29 Sept. 1495) on a fresh membrane (m 10, m 28).

What is strange about this account, but inexplicable, is that the controller breaks with the ancient convention that all the merchandise in one ship is recorded before going on to the next ship, even if the cockets for the merchandise in the second ship were issued on the same day (in which case its 'departure' is recorded as eodem die). Hitherto, all customs accounts had had the following form

De navi N.N. (1) 2° die Augusti

De [merchant A] pro [merchandise]
De [merchant B] pro [merchandise] etc.

De navi N.N. (2) eodem die

De [merchant A] pro [merchandise]
De [merchant B] pro [merchandise] etc.

However, if we examine ship 3 (p. 100) in the tunnage and poundage controlment roll for 1494/95 we begin to notice anomalies, beginning with the sixth entry in ship No. 3.

In the light of universal previous practise, it is odd that the scribe found it necessary to state in the sixth and seventh entries that the skipper, John Trewlove, and the alien (whose name is illegible) imported merchandise in Trewlove's ship, since this would have seemed to have been made perfectly clear in the superscription (De navi Johannis Trewlove eodem die), as in the second entry. Even odder is the fact that while Richard Clos's imports (entry 8) are recorded under Trewlove's ship as having been transported in the ships of John Skylman and Walrik Fredrykson, his further imports (lines 1 and 4) were not amalgamated with one another. Worst of all, this is not a one-time scribal slip, but is repeated throughout the account, but only in the import section.

Odd as this seemingly sloppy bookkeeping might seem, it remains characteristic of all tunnage and poundage accounts until the end of the period covered by this edition, irrespective of whether the account was drawn up by the customers themselves, the controller or the supervisor. Furthermore, this practise was only followed in the tunnage and poundage accounts. As far as I can see, it never spread to the wool customs and subsidy or to the petty customs accounts, both of which retained the old convention.

So why the amalgamation? I must admit at the outset that I have no explanation. It is, however, incumbent upon me to detail the blind alleys I have followed, in order to save future scholars fruitless work.

Let us begin with some observations. It was very much in a merchant's interest to amalgamate all customs charges imposed on the merchandise he shipped on a given date into one cocket. The few cockets we possess in the original reflect this desire.<sup>9</sup> However, if in 1494/95 the clerk was merely doing the merchants a favor and copying off the cockets mechanically, then it is difficult to understand why he did not lump all the imports of John Trewlove (lines 2, 6) and Richard Clos (lines 1, 4, 8) together. Clearly, both the cockets and the controller's roll must have been derived independently from the strips of paper on which the customers first recorded the imports, as these goods entered the harbor.<sup>10</sup>

In fact, there seems to be no pattern to the decision of the controller's clerk to amalgamate or not. First of all, it was anything but universal practise to do so. Of the 156 ships<sup>11</sup> bearing imports which the controlment roll distinguishes from one another by adding a superscription (e.g. De navi Johannis Trewlove eodem die) 36 were amalgamated, but 120 were not. There is no obvious clumping of amalgamated ships in the course of the year, which one might have expected if the press of business recording imports in the aftermath of the Brabant fairs had led the clerk to cut corners, and in any event the particulars of account and the other rolls

<sup>11</sup> Acute readers will object that I count 159 ships in the import section of the controlment roll. However, three of these are mere continuations of one ship (e.g. ship 63, p. 139: Adhuc de navi Ricardi Haller, continuing the entries for that ship on a new membrane) which I have not counted as separate ships in these calculations.

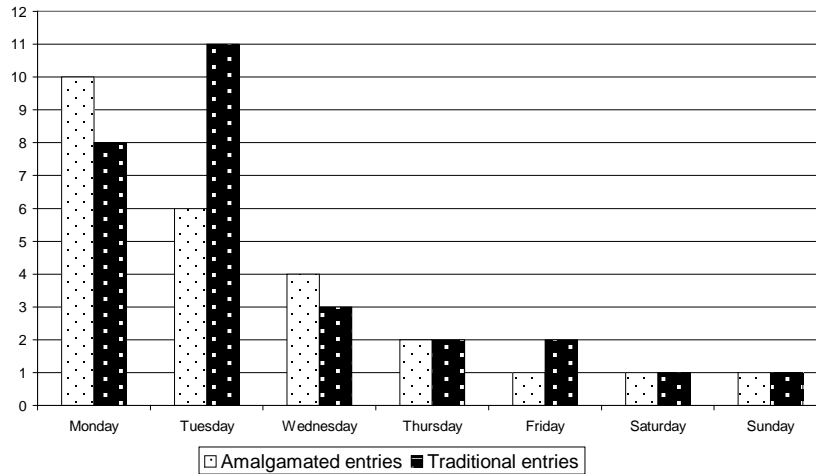

were drawn up at the end of the accounting period, when any such pressure had long since abated.

Nor can we explain the amalgamated entries as a favor for one group of merchants or another. Both indigenous and alien merchants benefited from this practise, although amalgamation was far commoner for English merchants than for aliens. Nor did one particular group of Englishmen profit from amalgamation. Analysis of the names reveals no obvious overlapping between merchants with amalgamated entries in the controlment roll and the members of the Mercers' Company or the Merchant Adventurers.

If the explanation for amalgamated entries is not to be found in the pressure of business or in the favorisation of one group of merchants or another, then it might be found in the internal workings of the customs administration itself. It is a striking fact that on seven of the 35 days in the year 1494/95 for which the controlment roll records imports, the clerk recorded amalgamated entries exclusively (8 Oct., 22 Oct., 3 Nov., 27 Dec., 27 Feb., 28 Apr. and 1 July) and none in the hitherto accustomed manner, only to reverse this procedure on ten further days (17 Nov., 26 Jan., 24 Feb., 6 Mar., 10 Mar., 19 June, 25 Aug., 31 Aug., 15 Sept., 22 Sept.) and record imports only in the traditional manner and none amalgamated. On the remaining 18 days, the clerk recorded imports both ways.

So the question has to be faced: Why did the controller or his clerk use one procedure exclusively on some days, the other procedure exclusively on other days and both procedures on a bare majority of the remaining days? It is conceivable that this depended on the day of the week. If the customers, the controller and their clerks did their paperwork during the week and only handed it out to the merchants on one day – let us, for the sake of argument, assume they had office hours on one day in the week only –, then it is conceivable that the dates given in the superscriptions in our controlment roll reflect not the day the paperwork arrived on their desks (or the ships in harbor) but rather the day on which it was handed out. If that is the case, then it should show up in the distribution of ship 'arrivals' across the week. Graph 1 shows the number of Mondays, Tuesdays etc. on which import cargoes were customed according to the one or the other procedure.

Graph 1: Distribution of ship 'arrivals' in London over the days of the week, 1494/95

The graph shows a clear preference for customing imports at the beginning of the week, the number of 'custom dates' (i.e. the dates given in the superscriptions) being greatest on Monday (for amalgamated entries) and Tuesday (for traditional entries) and both tailing off strongly towards the middle of the week. There is, however, nothing in the distribution of 'custom days' which provides an explanation for the controller's preference for one or the other procedure in recording imports (i.e. in aggregated or traditional form). Furthermore, there is no clear pattern which would indicate that the customers held office hours once a week and issued cockets and other certifications artificially dated to that particular day. Finally it is – in view of the Church's injunctions against violating the Sabbath – quite extraordinary that goods were customed on Sunday, 7 Dec. 1494.

Just to round off the picture, let us look at the export section of the account, since in this section all movements of goods were recorded in the traditional manner. Graph 2 shows the number of Mondays, Tuesdays etc. on which export cargoes were customed in 1494/95.

Graph 2: Distribution of ship 'departures' from London over the days of the week, 1494/95

The graph shows quite a different pattern. There is an obvious preference for customing exports in the middle of the week, the number of 'custom dates' being greatest on Wednesday and tailing off gradually towards the end of the week. However, there is no clear pattern which would indicate that the customers held office hours once a week and issued cockets artificially dated to that particular day. Most extraordinary – in view of the Church's injunctions against violating the Sabbath – is the fact that goods were customed on five Sundays in the year (12 Oct., 26 Oct., 22 Feb., 2 May and 2 Aug.).

Most intriguingly, however, a comparison of Graphs 1 and 2 seems to show that the collectors of tunnage and poundage in London in 1494/95 endeavored to spread their work out evenly over the week, dealing with imports primarily on Monday and Tuesday and with exports on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday.

However, one might object that in 1494/95 exports left London in one of two ways: by sea (in ships) and by land (in carts, waggons and on horseback). Since this might conceivably skew the results shown in Graph 2, it is imperative to disaggregate the modes of transportation. Graph 3 shows the number of Mondays, Tuesdays etc. on which export cargoes were customed, distinguishing between land and sea transport.

Graph 3: Distribution of 'departures' from London by land and sea over the days of the week, 1494/95

Graph 3 does not affect the conclusions drawn from Graph 2 in the slightest. The bunching of 'customs dates' in mid-week is clearly characteristic of sea transport alone, while land transport remains remarkably constant throughout the week.

Drawing all results together, Graph 4 shows the customers' week, with imports dominating the beginning of the week and exports most prominent in mid-week.

Graph 4: Distribution of ship 'departures' and 'arrivals' in London over the days of the week, 1494/95

Let's sum up this discussion. There is no explanation for why the controller used two different procedures to record imports in 1494/95. We can only eliminate certain conceivable explanations: the press of business on certain days of the year (e.g. following the Brabant fairs), the favourisation of one group of merchants or the internal workings of the customs administration itself. The investigation has, however, turned up evidence that – at least in 1494/95 – the controller (and, one would like to presume, the customers themselves) did endeavor to spread their work out over the week.

However, I must sound a clarion note of caution here. Our evidence, particularly in the export portion of the controlment roll, is very thin indeed. All Hanseatic imports and exports were free of tunnage and poundage, as were all indigenous cloth exports. Any ship with exclusively Hanseatic merchandise in its hold was completely invisible to the tunnage and poundage customers, as was any ship exporting only indigenous cloth. Therefore, we must reckon with an unknown number of ships which did, in fact, enter or leave the London customs district during 1494/95 but do not appear in our controlment roll, very possibly skewing, by that very fact, the evidence and my conclusions. Given this state of affairs, one cannot regard the results presented above as irreproachably robust. Worse yet, they are based on the analysis of one year only. And finally, it is not entirely clear how the customers might have been able to spread their work out over the week. While they might have been able to ask exporters to come back later in the week, it is difficult to understand how they might have been able to do so when goods were waiting at the quai to be landed, since it was the importer who approached the customer thus generating an entry in the customer's papers and fixing the 'customs date' in all further records. Lurking in the background – and deepening the shadows – is the fact that we know perilously little about how the customs administration worked – on the ground, from day to day – on the cusp of the sixteenth century. Almost our only source of knowledge is smuggling cases. Most of the time, smugglers just wrote off goods which had been seized as a total loss and did not respond to the Exchequer's call to come in and claim their goods. Just occasionally, however, a merchant did come in to claim that he had done everything just right and to protest that the seizure of his goods was therefore illegal. Even more occasionally, the merchant recounted the steps he had taken, in order to buttress his case. From these narratives, one can begin to reconstruct how a merchant went about paying customs in the fifteenth century.<sup>12</sup> And only when we have done that can we begin to make an educated guess about how a customer might have been able to nudge merchants to come back on a later day.

Consequently, I have been able to achieve little more here than signalling the problem and providing a preliminary sketch of what a solution might possible be.

<sup>12</sup> It ought to be mentioned that, in 1559 and 1564, legislation and regulations began to detail how cargo was to be loaded and unloaded and customs to be paid in London: 1 Eliz. I, c. 11; TNA: PRO, E159/250 m 319. For a summary, see Brian Dietz (ed.), The Port and Trade of Early Elizabethan London: Documents, London: London Record Society, 1972, p. x-xii. However, nothing justifies us in concluding that regulations of the mid-sixteenth century provide an accurate description of the procedures followed on the ground in the mid 1490s. The question can only be answered by systematically trawling through the smuggling cases, which can be found in the Recorda section of the King's Remembrancer's Memoranda Rolls (TNA: PRO, E159), digital images of which can be found on the web (aalt.law.uh.edu).

Diplomatic Notes on the Form of the Edition

The transcriptions of Latin documents in this edition observe the conventions of the Monumenta Germaniae Historica. The source texts (and all variants) are reproduced in normal type, while editorial intrusions are printed without exception in italics (e.g. mardre L3, in error). Unambiguous abbreviations are expanded silently, without using square brackets or italics to indicate missing letters. u/v and i/j have been regularized silently to accord with pronunciation: thus vniuersalis in the source text is rendered universalis, while 'i' is transcribed if the letter is pronounced as a vowel (imperii), and 'j' if the letter is pronounced as a consonant, i.e. like the 'y' in 'you' (majestas), even if the source writes imperij and maiestas.

Personal names and place names are transcribed exactly as written and only regularized in the Index of People and Places.

Roman numerals are reproduced as Arabic numerals, except for the sovereign's ordinal (Edwardi ivth). Arabic numerals which occur in the source texts are indicated by bold type. ob' is given as  $\frac{1}{2}d$ , q' as  $\frac{1}{4}d$  and ob' q' as  $\frac{3}{4}d$ .

Following the convention in German, I have used a full stop after a number to indicate the ordinal rather than the cardinal, if a number is not written out. Thus, 27. die Januarii (p. 147) is to be understood as vicesimo septimo die Januarii, rather than viginti septem die Januarii.

When transcribing the customs accounts, I have numbered the ships consecutively in italics in square brackets. The individual paragraphs of longer texts have also been numbered in the same way. The reason for this is that the web version of the accounts and accounting materials for the Lancastrian period has no pagination, since the amount of text displayed on the screen depends on the size of the monitor and its resolution. Consequently, cross references – whether within a single document, from one document to another or in the indices – to 'page thus-and-such' are meaningless, and some internal sub-division of the text which can be linked in is unavoidable. Since some scholars will want to use the printed version of the edition and others the web edition, it is necessary to provide a common basis. Thus, if one scholar refers to ship No. 24 in the digital version of a particular account, those using the printed version will be able to find the vessel in question.

All dates and cross references in the source texts have been resolved in italics in square brackets in the text of the edition, rather than in footnotes.

If both the particulars of account and the controlment roll survive, certain variants have been suppressed to avoid inflating the text-critical apparatus. Thus, neither the substitution of 'y' in one text for 'i' in the other (e.g. Willyamson, Williamson) nor middle English plural variants (-es, -is, -ys etc.) have been noted in the apparatus criticus. In general, I have limited the notation of textual variants to those cases in which the variant spelling of a word changes the pronunciation. Thus, the variant federbeds will be noted against fetherbeds, but not fedderbeds or federbeddes against federbeds.

Punctuation is artificial and ignores all medieval full stops, commas and so forth. Since Latin is a syntactic language (like German), the eminently useful MGH convention – namely to employ punctuation (according to the pre-reform German rules) to mark up the grammatical structure of the sentence – has been employed here. I have also broken up the stylistically elegant, but utterly incomprehensible run-on Latin sentences of the source texts into manageable units.

Since we are dealing with late medieval administrative Latin, there are some cases which call for local by-laws.

First of all, there are a number of middle English words embedded in the Latin texts which have to be assigned a gender, since they are often modified by an abbreviated adjective (e.g. pro 1 parv' fetherbed). Since the adjectives are written out in a number of instances (pro 1 parvo fetherbed), I have arbitrarily imposed a masculine grammatical gender on all middle English words rather than litter the edition with apostrophes.

Second, the sources themselves are in a muddle as to whether the words custuma and subsidium are singular or plural, and usually avoid the problem by writing cust' and subs'. If a scribe does write out the one or the other word, it is almost inevitable that he will contradict himself, writing custuma in one line and custume a few lines later. This muddle is not merely the result of scribal carelessness or low standards of Latinity. In the fifteenth century, it was possible to differentiate between the collective noun (in the singular) denoting the charges to be paid and the individual sums (in the plural) which each merchant rendered. Even bearing this in mind, however, scribes are simply not consistent. Taking each individual text as a whole, I have done my best to reproduce what the scribe seemed to be thinking.

TUNNAGE AND POUNDAGE CONTROLMENT ROLL 29 SEPT. 1494 – 29 SEPT. 1495

Controlment roll of John Millys for the issues of tunnage and poundage in London during the period from 29 Sept. 1494 to 29 Sept. 1495

L TNA: PRO, E122/79/5. Original controlment roll bound in Exchequer style (31 membranes, contemporaneously numbered from 1 to 31 in Roman numerals in the bottom centre of the membrane; in addition the import and export membranes were separately designated (imports: m 2 to m 8 as b, c ... h in the upper left hand corner of the membrane; m 10 to m 18 as 1, 2 ... 9 in Arabic numerals in the upper left hand corner of the membrane; m 19 as 10 in Roman numerals in the upper and lower right hand corners of the membrane; m 20 to 22 as 11, 12, 13 in Roman numerals in the upper right hand corner of the membrane; m 23 as 14 in Roman numerals in the upper and lower right hand corners of the membrane; m 24 as 15 in Roman numerals in the upper right hand corner of the membrane; exports: m 25 to m 27 as a, b, 3 c in Arabic numerals in the upper right hand corner of the membrane; m 28-30 as a, b, c in the upper right hand corner of the membrane)). Parchment. Unsealed. Some damage from damp.

It will be noted that the designation of the import membranes by letters (to m 8) is replaced by their designation by Arabic and Roman numerals (m 10-24), the transition taking place between 24 Feb. (m 9) to 27 Feb. (m 10). Likewise, the export membranes are divided into two groups by the fact that the alphabetical designation of the membranes was re-started at 'a' on m 28, the transition taking place between 22 Feb. (m 27) and 27 Feb. (m 28). The explanation lies in the fact that one of the customers, William Brett, died on 26 Feb. 1495<sup>1</sup> and his successor, Nicholas Mattok, was appointed on the following day.<sup>2</sup> The transition from letters to numbers (imports) and the re-starting of the alphabetical designation (exports) was undertaken in order to differentiate between the 12 import and export membranes of the controlment roll which corresponded to the 12 membranes of the particulars for the period for which William Curteys and Elizabeth

INDEX OF PEOPLE AND PLACES

In accordance with current usage, the first names of Englishmen and -women have been standardized to their current forms. Thus Willelmus in the accounts is indexed as William and so forth. Italian and Spanish first names are given in the 'ablative' (Andrea, Beaceo, Roderigo rather than Andreas, Beaceus, Roderigus). The first names of other foreigners, who are largely Dutch and German, are normally indexed in something approaching their modern forms, e.g. Johannes, Jacob, Herman, Hugo rather than Hugh (which would indicate an Englishman). However, it is not possible to be entirely consistent. Take, as an example, Willelmus. Is one to index Hanseatic merchants as Wilhelm, but Dutch merchants and shippers as Willem or Wim and the Dinanters as Guillaume? To do so would simply be to introduce incredible confusion, entirely leaving aside the intractable problem of distinguishing between merchants of Dutch and Hanseatic origin. Therefore, in a number of cases I have indexed Dutch and German merchants' first names in the current English form: e.g. Paul, William, Laurence, Andrew, Henry.

Family names have been grouped, where possible, in the index, with cross references leading the reader from the variants to the main entry, which records all variant spellings in parentheses. However, given the inconsistency of the customers' scribes, I have found it impossible to resolve all doubts and have therefore tried to steer a middle course between the splitters and the lumpers. There are cases where there can be no doubt that divergent spellings denote one and the same merchant. On the other hand, there are cases where I am all but certain that variant spellings denote one person, yet am troubled by nagging doubts. In these cases I record the names separately and referred back and forth ('see also N.N.').

The order of the family names in the index is phonological, so that, for instance, 'y' is alphabetized as 'i'.

Place names are in small capitals.

INDEX OF SUBJECTS

The index is structured so as to serve as a glossary. Hence, the main entry is under the word as it appears in the sources (zinziber), and a cross-reference leads the reader from the modern English term to the main entry (ginger see zinziber). In addition, general catchword entries in modern English lead the reader to the individual terms (spices see ... zinziber). If a term is in Middle English, the plural form is also given (e.g. alle hafte, -s); if in Latin, the genitive (e.g. allec, ecis). More than one reference per page is not noted.
